ABSTRACT

In February 1987, a questionnaire was mailed to all member institutions of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges, requesting information on services provided for students with disabilities. The survey investigated services for a wide range of disability categories, including emotionally disturbed, hearing impaired, learning disabled, mentally retarded, orthopedically handicapped, other health impaired, and visually impaired. Over 650 colleges responded to the survey, identifying an extensive range of services, including counseling, on- and/or off-campus housing, test modifications, expressive and receptive interpreters, learning centers and learning disabled services, notetakers, career/job placement, resource teachers, special new student orientations, registration assistance, readers and scribes, tutors, transportation, and taped texts. The survey report lists each responding college, the name and telephone number of a contact person for additional information, a coded list of the disability categories served, and a coded list of specific programs, support services, and agreements with government or private agencies. An index to colleges by disability category served and the survey instrument are included. (AYC)

HEATH Resource Center

The HEATH Resource Center operates the national clearinghouse on postsecondary education for individuals with handicaps as a program of the American Council on Education. HEATH is an acronym for Higher Education and Adult Training for people with Handicaps. Support from the United States Department of Education enables the Center to serve as an information exchange about educational support services, policies, procedures, adaptations, and opportunities on American campuses, vocational-technical schools, adult education programs, independent living centers, and other training entities after high school. The center gathers and disseminates this information so that handicapped people, if they choose, can develop their full potential through postsecondary education and training.

The HEATH Resource Center can be reached at One Dupont Circle, Suite 800, Washington, DC 20036-1193. In the Washington, DC Metropolitan Area (202) 939-9320, Outside the Washington, DC Area toll-free (800) 54-HEATH—both numbers are Voice/TDD.

Community Colleges and Students with Disabilities: Directory of Services and Programs was developed jointly by American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and American Council on Education to underscore the significant role which community colleges play in providing education and training to students with disabilities in the United States.

John Prihoda of Iowa Valley Community College District deserves special recognition for his vision to create the Directory as well as his colleagues at Iowa State University, Ted Bieber, Carol Kay, Patricia Kerkstra, and James Ratcliff, for making the Directory a reality.

The Editorial Review Committee for this Directory includes representatives of American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and American Council on Education, Department of Education, Association on Handicapped Student Service Programs in Postsecondary Education, and the HEATH Advisory Board. James F. Gollatzcheck, Donald Slowinski, James Murray, Helene Corradino, Tom Thompson, David Katz were all effective in the editorial process.

Community Colleges and Students with Disabilities: Directory of Services and Programs, 1987, was prepared under Cooperative Agreement No. G0084C3501 awarded to the American Council on Education by the U.S. Department of Education.

INTRODUCTION

Community, technical, and junior colleges enroll nearly half of the nation's undergraduates. They offer programs for students who plan to transfer to a baccalaureate degree-granting institution as well as career preparation programs and a full range of adult and continuing education opportunities. Because they are responsive to community needs, are local in nature, flexible in programming, and nominal in cost, two-year colleges enroll a significant proportion of students from diverse backgrounds: 43% of all black college students, 55% of all Hispanic college students, 42% of all Asian college students, and 56% of all American Indian students. This Directory highlights another aspect of that diversity — the remarkable record of two-year college's inclusion of one of the nation's largest minorities — those with disabilities.

For nearly half a century the American Council on Education and the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges have shared a mutual commitment to fostering the interests of two-year institutions. Preparing this Directory has given us the opportunity to review the accomplishments of American colleges over the past decade in extending educational opportunity to qualified persons, including those with handicaps. In this decade we have gone from responding to problems created by architectural barriers to increasing access and opportunity for persons with disabilities in the fabric of our own organizations and in that of our member institutions.

This Directory shows that more than half of the nation's community, technical, and junior colleges educate students with a wide variety of disabling conditions. To do so, most have designated a contact person, have a variety of programs and services in place, and have developed effective relationships with relevant local, state, regional, and federal agencies.

Staff at two-year institutions have provided leadership in the development of cost effective and creative accommodations in all areas of campus life: recruitment, admissions, and orientation; classroom, laboratory, library, and athletic facility adaptation; career planning and placement programs; and extensive incorporation of electronic technology for student use. Through presentations at a full spectrum of national, regional, and local conferences, as well as articles in numerous publications, administrators and staff of community colleges have shared their ideas and expertise.

The HEATH Resource Center of the American Council on Education, which sponsored this Directory, has had a major role in making known the educational and training opportunities available after high school for people with handicaps. For the past ten years HEATH has collected and disseminated a variety of information, stimulated those coordinating services for disabled students on campus to do the same, and promoted the development of accommodations which enable people with disabilities to participate in regular, as well as specialized, postsecondary programs in the least restrictive and most productive settings for each individual. This Directory provides another significant means of communication for our members. The contact persons listed in the Directory invite your inquiries and encourage development of additional ways to educate and train students with disabilities to become productive citizens of their communities.

FOREWORD

This first edition of Community Colleges and Students with Disabilities: A Directory of Services and Programs reflects the new and changing educational opportunities for adults with disabilities in the United States.

Within the past decade, increasing numbers of individuals enrolled in American institutions of higher education. Historically, many of these students would have been denied access to postsecondary education because of specified or unspecified limitations. These limitations include educational preparation, academic records, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, sex, and age as well as hidden or observable handicapped conditions. In order to accommodate diverse students, public and private institutions implemented special and supportive programs. These programs were designed in response to the demand to provide opportunities for successful postsecondary experiences for a heterogeneous population of students with employment needs and characteristics different from those pursuing postsecondary education in the past (Hippolitus, 1987).

Legislation

Included in this growth and development is the proliferation of innovative and special programs for individuals with disabilities. The expansion of programs to include disabled students was primarily the result of federal legislation: the Education of the Handicapped Act and Amendments (especially P.L. 94-142), the Vocational Education Amendment of 1976 (P.L. 94-482) and Amendments, and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

A national survey by the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped in 1977 reported on services and programs available to disabled students in five hundred (500) two and four year colleges. A decade later Thomas and Thomas reported on similar services in over 2,300 colleges and universities. While services for disabled students exist at all levels of postsecondary education, most analyses of current programs indicate that the majority of students are served through the public community colleges.

The Community College Response

Programs for disabled students on community college campuses have been in development for almost two decades with greatest expansion taking place since 1970 (Jarrow, 1987; Thomas and Thomas, 1986). This recognition of the disabled students' need for access has been a thrust of community college educators in their attempt to fulfill the mission to serve the entire community. The majority of disabled students in the United States access higher education through the public community colleges (AHSSPPE, 1980; NACUBO, 1981).

Over twenty years ago, Karabel (1973) reported that fully one-third of all students entering higher education did so through two year schools; in California, that figure rose to 80 percent. In fact, due to their community-based nature, two year public institutions attracted greater numbers of students with disabilities than did all other types of institutions (AHSSPPE, 1980). Since the highest percentage of open admissions institutions in postsecondary education are community colleges, it is not surprising that these institutions were the first to confront the need for disabled students' support programs (Grant and Hoeber, 1978).

Community colleges currently provide a wide range of services and programs for disabled students. These programs may include academic and career counseling, diagnostic testing, vocational planning, accessible facilities and technology, adapted educational materials, learning support centers, transportation assistance, aides and/or attendants, support groups, and equipment loan and/or repair (Moss, 1984; Bryan and Becker, 1980; Bevilacqua and Osterlink, 1979; McElroy, 1979; Reid, 1979; and Harkins, 1978; Caparosa, 1985).

THE DIRECTORY

In February, 1987, a survey requesting information describing services designed for students with disabilities was mailed to all member institutions of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. The survey requested information pertaining to a wide range of disability categories including emotionally disturbed, hearing impaired, learning disabled, mentally retarded, orthopedically handicapped, other health impaired, and visually impaired. Program and services information were also requested.

A copy of the survey instrument is provided in Appendix on page I-41.

Over 650 colleges responded to the survey. Each college provided the name, address, and telephone number of its contact person or institutional representative as well as descriptions of programs/services offered and populations served. The colleges surveyed offer a vast array of services. These services and their identifying codes are provided below:

- (C) Counseling - Services including assessment as well as personal, social, vocational, and academic counseling.
- (Ca) On-campus housing, some of which is accessible to mobility impaired students.
- (H) Test modifications - Alternatives to traditional test taking practices. May include oral response to taped questions, print enlarger or other reading device, permission for extra time, and alternative testing locations, and Extended time - The willingness of campus administrators and faculty to allow more than the "usual" time to complete a diploma, certificate, or degree program. May also refer to "extra time" allowed for completing research papers, exams, or other assignments.
- (I) Interpreters - Qualified individuals, skilled in both expressive and receptive interpreting, responsible for translating oral lectures and class discussion to hearing impaired students.

- (L) Learning Centers and LD Services - Facilities or centers where developmental, learning disabled, and/or remedial students can receive individualized or small group instruction, academic support activities, and other forms of academic assistance. Services for learning disabled students may include use of recorded texts, notetakers and extended time for tests. Comprehensive LD programs offer diagnostic testing, individualized education plans, and specialized tutoring.
- (N) Notetakers - Individual students who take notes in class and provide copies to students whose disabilities prevent effective notetaking.
- (O) Housing - Off campus housing
- (P) Career/job planning placement - Activities including pre-employment counseling and instruction, small group or individualized sessions designed to acquaint students with career options and opportunities, employer contacts and post-employment follow-up. May include job seeking skills such as resume writing classes, assertiveness training, interview arrangements, coop placement, and assistance in seeking changes in employment.
- (R) Resource teacher - An educator responsible for providing direct or coordinated services to disabled students.
- (Ra) New student orientation - A special orientation program which may include assistance from a mobility instructor, maps with curb cuts designated, access ramps, tactile format maps, and/or maps in large print or in a cassette form. Registration assistance - Special assistance during the registration process which may include special advising, course selection, and assistance with the manual, touch-tone, or automated processes. Orientation may also include academic preparation and assessment of readiness for specific academic classes.

- (Rd) Readers and Scribes - Students or paraprofessionals designated as readers for assignments and examinations or individuals who assist visually impaired, orthopedically, or learning disabled students in writing tests.
- (T) Tutors - Individuals, either peer or paraprofessional, enlisted to provide academic assistance in a particular subject. Can be tutorial, remedial, or developmental.
- (Tr) Transportation - Some of which is accessible to mobility impaired students.
- (X) Taped texts - Access to a comprehensive library of taped texts, resource materials, and general references.

The purpose of this Directory is twofold. It is designed to inform students, their parents, counselors, faculty, and administrators of the strategies and services available to students with disabilities through the community colleges in the United States. Secondly, the Directory provides a networking opportunity for current providers who seek information describing other institutional offerings.

SUGGESTIONS TO USERS

No attempt was made to evaluate the programs and services listed in the Directory. Additionally, the authors did not assess the quality of one program over another. It is the responsibility of the user to investigate the programs closely to determine the degree to which they will meet specific needs.

All of the colleges listed offer catalogs, brochures, and/or program sheets. These materials may be obtained by writing or calling the institutional representative indicated for each college. The printed materials and telephone conversations will be helpful prior to scheduling an on-campus visit. Prospective students may wish to take these investigatory steps at least six months prior to enrollment.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DIRECTORY

Each community college represented in the Directory is listed as a separate entry and provides:

1. the college - name, address, and telephone number of the contact person/institutional representative
2. a listing of the disabled populations served and the special programs and services available for the populations.

An example of institutional entries is provided below.

College/Address	Contact/ Telephone	Disabilities Served	Services

The colleges are listed in alphabetical order by state. However, users may be interested in identifying colleges through their programs or services for a specific disability. In that case, readers may wish to use the separate index at the end of the Directory. The index lists college programs according to type of disability and provides the name of the college, city, state, and the page number of the specific entry. An example is provided below:

SELECTED EXAMPLES

In order to help readers to understand what programs are like for students with disabilities on community college campuses, several vignettes were selected by the editor. These programs are not necessarily the most comprehensive or longest serving or necessarily most noteworthy, but they illustrate the development and range of services which according to the following Directory are operating in more than half of the nation's community colleges today.

William Rainey Harper College, IL

The Disabled Student Services department came into existence in 1973 because of a community interest in serving hearing impaired students. Today, these students represent the second largest disability group on campus, and they can now benefit from a specialized English as a Second Language Program for the Hearing Impaired. Learning disabled students, which is the largest disability population on campus, benefit from remedial instruction, tutoring, special advising and diagnostic testing.

Over the years, as the enrollment of disabled students has climbed, new populations and needs have emerged. In the past academic year, sixteen traumatically brain injured students were able to take part in a support group, receive specialized training and advising about how to reformulate their personal/vocational goals.

New and old sources of funding from the Department of Rehabilitation Services and from the Job Training Partnership Act have opened doors of vocational opportunity and provided financial support to the approximately 300 students who will be served in this academic year.

Essex Community College, MD

The Office of Special Services at Essex Community College in Baltimore County, Maryland is now in its 6th year of operation. When it was established in 1981, 16 disabled students had been identified. Now between 160 and 200 students with a full range of disabling conditions register with the office each semester, the largest group of which is learning disabled.

All contact with the Office is purely voluntary on the part of the student, and the type and amount of contact can range from students requesting notification of instructors once a semester to daily mobility assistance, weekly professional tutoring, or occasional taping of textbooks or brailing of materials for classes.

Essex has attracted many learning disabled students by employing a full-time educational specialist in learning disabilities and offering an array of services from professional tutoring to a special section of a "How to Study" course just for LD students.

Essex Community College provides a tuition waiver for individuals who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or Social Security Disability Income (SSDI). This has increased the number of students who are clients of the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) and has fostered more interaction between the two agencies.

The college also works with local educational agencies, special education programs, Easter Seal Society, Muscular Dystrophy Association, the Epilepsy Association, and the Maryland Rehabilitation Center as well as private rehabilitation and insurance companies to help successful transition both to and from the college.

ADDENDUM

The following colleges are also known to provide services to students with disabilities. The colleges listed below have either sent information about their campus to HEATH for the Campus Resource File and/or have one or more staff who are members of Association of Handicapped Student Service Programs in Postsecondary Education, the nation's professional organization which promotes the concerns of postsecondary education and disability issues. For details about membership and related publications contact AHSSPPE, P.O. Box 21192, Columbus, OH 43221. (614) 488-4972 (Voice/TDD).
